EMOTIONAL INTELLIGENCE (24)

Emotions are the glue that connect you to other people, they guide your knowledge of when to respond immediately and when to stop and think. Regular intelligence is the ability to solve problems, manage life, reason and rationalise in general. Emotional Intelligence is the ability to think clearly, creatively, handle difficult situations, events and people in a way that can help make a difference. Gaining awareness and developing these skills in recognising your emotions is essential to your social well-being.

20 March Central America Sonia Kellett

What do we know about Central America? That the seven independent countries that make up the tapering isthmus of southern North America – Belize, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Panama – have a history of conflict, revolutions, social unrest and natural disasters. But it is also known for its bio-diversity, great beauty, teeming animal life, vast forests, mountain ranges and fertile valleys, stunning beaches, gentle people and for the production of coffee, tobacco, beans and other crops. So why is it called a banana republic? Find out the answers to and more by exploring this fascinating part of the world.

3 April Amazing True Experiences in China Dr Elizabeth Parry
